Crisp Finding hope in tragedy

J.T. MCVEIGH/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Steve Crisp answers questions about his son Brandon as his daughter Natasha and wife Angelika look on before a visitation in Barrie yesterday. The father of the boy who died after running away following an argument over his Xbox said he hopes the tragedy will serve to help other children pursue their athletic goals through a foundation set up in his name. Study urges action on youth violence

Addressing mental health key to prevention, author says

An architect of a long-awaited probe into youth violence says he was struck by how big a role mental health plays in the issue and is urging the government to address the problem now, despite the faltering economy.

Former Liberal MPP Alvin Curling says that over the 17 months he worked on the study, he was surprised how many young people are traumatized and fearful.

The landmark Roots of Youth Violence study by Curling and retired Ontario chief justice Roy McMurtry, being released this morning, will recommend improving mental health services for young people and streamlining government departments to ensure better access to programs.

"Government must act. If you don't do it, it costs you more," Curling said yesterday. "The government is not seeing that the costs of incarceration and all that are just continuing to become what I call an industry. We warehouse them and put them in jail."

Commissioned by Premier Dalton McGuinty after the May 2007 shooting death of student Jordan Manners at C.W. Jefferys Collegiate, the report is a blueprint for the province on combatting youth violence.

"We're talking about rearrangement and re-organization of the government," said Curling. "We have three ... ministries dealing with crime — public safety, attorney general, and children and youth services — and a lot of duplication happens here." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Time vs. money

- Even though the economy is slowing and Ontario is running a $500-million budget deficit, author and former MPP Alvin Curling said the province must resist the temptation to put off dealing with the problem until times are good again.

Crisis deepens as Group of 20 gathers in U.S.

ECONOMY With global recession looming, Prime Minister Stephen Harper and other world leaders gather today in Washington for an extraordinary summit aimed at confronting an extraordinary economic crisis.

In effect, today's first-ever meeting of leaders from the so-called Group of 20, which includes China, Brazil and India, is an admission by the developed world that it can't weather this storm by itself.

That storm continued yesterday as stock markets were again chaotic, falling in Japan and Europe while eventually rallying in Toronto and New York.

Germany announced yesterday it is now in recession. And the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development joined the International Monetary Fund in predicting the economies of Europe, Japan and the U.S. will shrink next year. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

GTA may hold key to Bond's beginning

INSPIRATION When Quantum of Solace opens today in theatres across the city, moviegoers may be unaware of the GTA's place in Ian Fleming's James Bond mythology.

While some believe Fleming named his intrepid spy after James Bond, the American ornithologist and author of Birds of the West Indies, the author of 12 bestselling Bond novels never revealed the true source of the character.

Which brings us to the GTA's possible influence.

- Camp X — A few empty fields near Lake Ontario and a lonely monument are all that's left of Camp X, a top-secret paramilitary training installation built on the Whitby-Oshawa border and open from 1941 to the fall of 1944. Fleming is believed to have visited Camp X in 1942 while serving with British naval intelligence.
- Sinclair House — On the grounds of Camp X sat a charming white farmhouse, now long gone. It was the site of a crucial test to determine if agents could kill in cold blood and deserved licence to do so. It was here that Fleming failed such a test.
- St. James-Bond United Church — Yes, there really was a church in Toronto with that name, at the corner of Avenue Road and Willowbank Boulevard. It was torn down in the summer of 2006 and remains a hole in the ground.

Recouping expenses

Police handed audit report

Toronto's Catholic trustees will pay back every penny of the almost $30,000 in questionable or ineligible expenses cited in a forensic audit, Ontario's education minister said after turning the report over to Toronto police yesterday.

Once police have wrapped up their investigation, "any unpaid amounts we are going to recoup through a reduction in trustee honoraria," Wynne said.

Three per cent of total spending since late 2003 was deemed questionable by auditors. While most trustees have already repaid about $10,000 of ineligible expenses, almost $20,000 is outstanding.

In September, stricter spending guidelines were implemented, with invoices going directly to the director of education — guidelines that will serve as a model for other boards across the province while saving the Catholic board several hundred thousand dollars a year.

Wynne ordered the forensic audit after Norbert Hartmann, who has since been sent in to take financial control of the board from trustees, found the 12 trustees to be among the biggest spenders in the province with many duplicate billings.

Confronting harsh reality in Toronto schools

By CHRISTINE WILLIAMS

The chair of the Toronto District School Board has finally ordered a full-time police officer to be assigned to C.W. Jefferys Collegiate. But only after 16-year-old Daniel Anderson was stabbed in the school cafeteria. He then took a cab home and left a trail of blood in his apartment building for his horrified mom to discover before he collapsed on the floor.

Fortunately, Daniel fared better than 15-year-old Jordan Manners, who was shot and killed at that same school 18 months ago.

The Manners tragedy led to the emergence of the Falconer Report, prepared by the School Community Safety Panel and presented to the TDSB last January with 120 recommendations on safety improvement. They included drastic measures like the instalment of surveillance cameras, patrolling canine units and armed officers in schools.

Views

The report declared students were living in a "culture of fear," pointing out a survey revealing 37 per cent of C.W. Jeffreys students have been physically assaulted, 20 per cent more than once.

Yet the trustee for C.W. Jefferys, Stephanie Payne, insisted initially that parents and students did not want a police officer present, and principal Audley Salmon actually said his school was one of the safest he had ever been in, refusing a security guard when many other schools opted for one.

It's funny how the latest stabbing victim's mom describes feeling unsafe and frightened on a visit to that same school. She now wonders why the school did not jump at the opportunity to install a full-time officer before her son was stabbed, a question echoed repeatedly by parents and students alike, leaving Payne no choice but to say that she now believes an officer should be assigned.

The high school teachers' union has accused C.W. Jeffreys of ignoring safety plans and the chair of the TDSB has now ordered a full-time police officer, but it's unfortunate it had to come down to a student being stabbed.

For the safety of our children, it is high time to abandon the charade of cleaving to the politically correct meanderings of those more interested in saving face than protecting young lives. It's no secret there is a disproportionate threat of violence in schools in areas where gang activity is thriving on the blood of mostly poor, black youth. Students cannot learn in an atmosphere of fear and that understanding is a positive starting point.

U of T honours primatologist Goodall

DOCTORATE Nearly 50 years after she started studying chimpanzees, Dr. Jane Goodall last night accepted an honorary doctorate from the University of Toronto, the first of two degrees she is expected to receive in Toronto this week.

The university held a special ceremony at its convocation hall to honour the famous primatologist for her lifelong conservation and humanitarian work, and grant her the degree of Doctor of Science, said Jane Lawton, executive director of the Jane Goodall Institute of Canada.

"It's an opportunity for me to get into a university setting and talk to graduates who are just going out into this dangerous and worrisome world, and hopefully give them a message that will help them," Goodall said yesterday of the degree.

Goodall, 74, began her research on Africa's wild chimpanzees in 1960. Her findings challenged mainstream notions of humanity by showing the similarities between humans and chimps.

She is also scheduled to receive a Doctorate of Philosophy from the University of Haifa at a fundraising dinner on Sunday.

Industry group pans city plan to limit plastic

TAGHREED SAADEH
for Metro Toronto

The Environment and Plastics Industry Council EPIC is criticizing the Toronto in-store packaging proposal saying that it will drive up the cost of food for residents.

Cathy Cirko, vice-president of EPIC, said, "The City wants to limit the materials retailers can use for their at-store food packaging by banning plastic packaging and force them to pay out incentives on coffee cups and reusable carry bags, which will affect everyone and cost at least $300 million or $400 per household.

"Costs will be passed on to consumers in the form of higher prices, increasing the average family's food bill by more than $400 a year, " added Cirko.

Cirko said that will hurt small community food outlets as well as butchers, bakers, delis, grocery stores, local restaurants and local franchise operators for quick service establishments.

"They will all have to offer incentives and move to packaging that costs far more than plastic," she said.

By June 1, 2009, the city-proposed plan would require retailers to provide discounts for consumers bringing reusable bags and refillable cups to between 10 to 20 cents. It also recommends banning hot drink cups that aren't compatible with the city's recycling program, effective Dec. 31, 2009, and proposes by Dec. 31, 2010, food service retailers in Toronto must develop a reusable or refillable take-out food container, or take-out food service protocol.

It also proposes banning the sale of bottled water at city civic centres by Dec. 31, 2011

"This is hidden taxation ... the overall cost is estimated to be $300 million just for the incentives and the bans on plastic food packaging," said Cirko.

"They will all have to offer incentives and move to packaging that costs far more than plastic."
Cathy Cirko, VP, EPIC

Cirko said the city recycles only 13 per cent from multi-residential buildings and needs to get that to 70 per cent. "There are lots of areas where the city could improve on recycling without hammering residents (with) additional costs.

"To encourage the city to invest in one piece of new sorting equipment, that will allow more of this packaging to be recovered," added Cirko. "It will solve their diversion problem quickly and economically without putting a huge cost on taxpayers."

Victim's parents to protest parole bid

MORTON George and Debbie Levack want to see their son's killer, Justin Morton, behind bars for life.

At 14, Morton strangled Eric Levack, also 14, in April 2003 near Heart Lake Secondary School in Brampton.

He told psychiatrists he got the same adrenalin rush from killing his classmate as he did from looking for Christmas presents.

Today, Morton, now 20, is in an assessment wing at Millhaven Penitentiary in Kingston after being transferred yesterday into the adult federal system. He is serving a life sentence with no parole for a minimum seven years. He is now eligible to apply for day parole. The Levacks vow to block any bid by Morton for parole. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Cops search for suspect in Markham sex assaults

Prestigious prize for Toronto prof

At first Eugenia Kumacheva thought the person on the phone was trying to sell her something.

"I'm on the other line, and it is an overseas call," the University of Toronto chemistry professor told the woman on the other end. "I have to go."

An annoyed Kumacheva was just about to hang up when the woman said, "Please hold on. Ahmed Zewail wants to speak with you," referring to the 1999 winner of the Nobel Prize in Chemistry, and jury president of the L'Oreal-UNESCO Award for Women in Science.

Zewail was calling to tell Kumacheva that she was one of five women globally to be selected for the prestigious science prize — this year's North American selection, and the first Canadian to be selected in the award's 11-year history.

"I didn't expect it at all," said the modest Kumacheva, sitting in her office at 80 St. George St., a wall full of awards and patents displayed behind her.

Kumacheva's area of expertise is working with polymers and polymer materials. She tries to produce polymers that can be used in a range of fields, from "data storage and security to delivery of cancer drugs, and control growth of stem cells," she said.

She came to the University of Toronto in 1996, intent on studying "fundamentals" like how polymers react on surfaces, and soon found the area of research was limitless.

As far as research goes, Kumacheva's interests are vast, and driven by an inherent curiosity to find answers. "I have the ideas first, and then think how it can be done," she said. Not surprising, then, that as a teenager in Russia, she was interested in literature and poetry.

Witness recalls moments just before Jane Creba shooting

COURT A group of males alleged to be involved in the shootout that killed Jane Creba stood motionless when first confronted by an aggressive gunman, a youth's murder trial has heard.

"Nobody was moving when this guy was brandishing his gun. Everyone was just standing?" suggested defence lawyer Gary Grill yesterday.

"Yes," agreed a 20-year-old woman who cannot be identified because she was 17 at the time of the Boxing Day 2005 gun battle on crowded Yonge Street.

"Nobody was moving when this guy was brandishing his gun. Everyone was just standing?" Lawyer Gary Grill

No one said anything before the gunman wearing a "Stop Snitching" T-shirt under his coat pulled a pistol out of his sleeve and started shooting, she agreed.

The woman was testifying in the second-degree murder trial of a man who can only be identified as J.S.R. because he was a youth when Creba was shot in the crossfire.

News in brief

ASSETS The Conservative government is considering selling off capital assets to help balance the books, a sale that could include the CN Tower, Finance Minister Jim Flaherty said yesterday. Other belt-tightening measures under consideration include public sector pay freezes, and cuts to operating expenditures, Flaherty added. At a news conference at the Conservative party's national policy convention, Flaherty declined to say which assets are on the block, but said such a sale is "one way of reducing a deficit, or perhaps having a small surplus." Liberal leadership candidate Michael Ignatieff announces his candidacy in the Liberal leadership race in Ottawa yesterday.

Iggy kicks off race for Grits leadership

LIBERALS Michael Ignatieff began his second bid for the Liberal party leadership yesterday, casting himself as a more humble, seasoned competitor who's learned from his mistakes.

The presumed front-runner also took pains to strike an amicable tone for what's shaping up to be another head-on fight against his longtime friend and former university roommate, Bob Rae.

"I'm going to be in competition with some fine fellow Liberals but I'm not running against any of them," Ignatieff told a low-key news conference.

"I'm running against Stephen Harper and the Conservative government." Rae and New Brunswick MP Dominic LeBlanc are the only other contenders to have taken the plunge. Other potential candidates — including heavyweights Frank McKenna and John Manley — have taken a pass. Former cabinet minister Martin Cauchon will announce his decision early next week. And Brampton MP Ruby Dhalla said she'll decide within 10 days.

Canada, U.S. talk auto bailout

Finance minister stresses need for change in industry

Ottawa is holding informal talks with Washington to coordinate financial aid for struggling Big Three auto makers, Finance Minister Jim Flaherty says.

But he's warning that any infusion of federal cash will be contingent on auto makers changing their product lines to produce fuel-efficient vehicles, including hybrids, that appeal to consumers bruised by the high price of gas.

Flaherty said yesterday that it's vital that the federal government talk to the U.S. administration about help for the auto sector, since the two markets are deeply integrated and auto manufacturing straddles the border.

"The jobs of thousands upon thousands of hardworking, extremely productive Canadian workers depend on the survival of the Big Three."
Michael Ignatieff

"We need to talk to each other. Of course we do, because this is an integrated production system," he said, adding that parts are routinely transported criss-cross the border between plants as they are being assembled into vehicles.

While Flaherty has appeared publicly cool to the idea of a government bailout for the struggling car makers, it's apparent that intense work is going on behind-the-scenes involving Queen's Park, executives from General Motors, Ford and Chrysler and even U.S. officials to hammer out a package that is acceptable to all.

Meanwhile, Liberal Michael Ignatieff argued that it is not a time to start "demonizing" the auto companies: "The jobs of thousands upon thousands of hardworking, extremely productive Canadian workers depend on the survival of the Big Three."

More difficult times ahead: Harper

TORIES As he heads to crucial international meetings in Washington, Prime Minister Stephen Harper repeated what's become his government's mantra: tougher times are still to come.

At a keynote opening address to the Conservative Party's national policy convention, Harper said he would emphasize to other world leaders what Canada has already done to buffer the impact of a recessional tide sweeping the globe.

However, he warned about 2,000 Conservatives gathered here that more would probably be necessary. The full impact of the global economic crisis is yet to be felt, he said.

"Canada is not an island."
Stephen Harper

"Canada is not an island," said Harper. "Make no mistake, there are much more difficult times ahead."

Harper appeared to craft a message especially to fiscal conservatives who have long formed the base of his party: be prepared to see more government intervention and spending than they would ordinarily welcome.

"We will have to be both tough and pragmatic, not unrealistic or ideological, in dealing with the complex economic challenges before us."

"The nature of the problem is global, and so the solution to it will have to be global as well."

He said he would ensure "any agreements reached in Washington will protect our future."

Spending on healthcare will continue to rise

STUDY Canada's health-care spending will continue to outpace inflation this year, reaching $171.9 billion or $5,170 per person, a new study predicts.

Spending is forecast to be $10.3 billion more than the estimated expenditure for 2007, or a 3.4 per cent increase after adjusting for inflation and population growth. That's similar to growth rates of 2.8 per cent last year, says the annual study by the Canadian Institute for Health Information. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Former prime minister Paul Martin spoke to Metro yesterday.

Working with Bush was trying at times: Martin

PAUL MCLEOD

Imagine working with George Bush.

Part of the territory is getting upstaged and annoyed, former prime minister Paul Martin told Metro yesterday in Halifax.

"I talked to Tony Blair about this same thing. This is not untypical of U.S. presidents. That's not only George Bush," he said.

Martin said he worked with Bush for years, mostly successfully.

The Bush administration was also the lone country to block Martin's personal passion project of a G20 meeting. That group will meet tomorrow in Washington to discuss global recession. "It would have been a lot better if it'd been set up earlier," he said.

Canadian team discovers new massive planets

A Canadian-led team of astronomers has captured images of three giant planets outside our solar system, orbiting a distant star known as HR8799.

The research team, led by astronomer Christian Marois of the National Research Council Canada/Herzberg Institute of Astrophysics, used advanced instrumentation and image-processing techniques to detect the three faint planets against the bright glare of their host star.

"This is truly an amazing discovery." David Lafreniere

The primary star, barely visible to the naked eye, lies 130 light years from Earth in the constellation Pegasus.

Its mass is about 1.5 times that of the sun.

David Lafreniere, a member of the discovery team, said the pioneering work of his colleagues has finally paid off. "This is truly an amazing discovery," he said. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Judge opens up about resignation from probe

A refusal to "surrender" his vision for a residential schools commission to a pair of "relative strangers" to the complex relationship between aboriginals and other Canadians drove him to quit as head of the federal probe, Justice Harry LaForme said yesterday.

"I could not abdicate or surrender my dreams and visions about the truth and reconciliation commission to the two others." Justice Harry LaForme

LaForme, who is aboriginal, resigned last month as the chairman of the Indian Residential School Truth and Reconciliation Commission, which is tasked with documenting the experiences of former students.

The Ontario Court of Appeal judge opened up publicly about his resignation for the first time yesterday in a speech on ethics at Ryerson University.

He said his "moral code" was the reason he felt he could no longer lead the commission.

"I could not abdicate or surrender my dreams and visions about the truth and reconciliation commission to the two others," LaForme said.

The commission was thrown into chaos last month when LaForme suddenly quit. He said it was on the "verge of paralysis" because its two commissioners, Claudette Dumont-Smith and Jane Brewin Morley, did not accept his authority.

LaForme said he and the two commissioners were given a framework for the commission that detailed their mandates.

But just months after starting work on the commission, LaForme said their roles "dramatically changed," and the commissioners were under the impression their roles were equal to his.

The two women said in a statement last month the commission is unique and therefore it is not surprising there have been "growing pains."

Supreme Court won't interfere with Mountie's grave

RCMP The Supreme Court's decision not to get involved in a family fight over the remains of a Mountie murdered in the 2005 Mayerthorpe massacre has brought no solace to either side in the bitter dispute.

In a decision released without comment yesterday, the Supreme Court of Canada rejected a request by Const. Leo Johnston's parents to stop his widow from moving the body from his hometown of Lac la Biche, Alta., to the national RCMP cemetery in Regina.

Trading Obama?

A photo provided yesterday by New York-based The Topps Company, Inc., shows a wrapper for a new set of Topps trading cards documenting the political life of president-elect Barack Obama. News in brief CRIME Prosecutors filed a murder charge yesterday against an Austrian man accused of imprisoning his daughter for 24 years and fathering her seven children, saying one of the youngsters who died in infancy might have survived if they had been taken to a doctor. Josef Fritzl "deliberately decided not to intervene" and save the infant's life, said the indictment, which also charges the 73-year-old retired electrician with rape, incest, false imprisonment and enslavement.

INVESTIGATION Safety investigators have singled out undersized steel plates as the chief cause of last year's collapse of a highway bridge in Minneapolis that killed 13 people and injured 145. "Had the gusset plates been properly sized, this bridge would still be there," said Bruce Magladry, director of the National Transportation Safety Board's office of highway safety.

Still standing

'We have to show them the way': Palin

Sarah Palin is calling on fellow Republican governors to keep the new president and his strengthened Democratic majority in check on issues ranging from taxes to health care.

This year's Republican vice-presidential nominee and oft-mentioned presidential candidate for 2012 also signalled she will take a leadership role in the party's search for a new standard-bearer.

Addressing the Republican Governors Association meeting in Miami yesterday, Palin revisited some aspects of the bitter campaign and talked about the role of the governors in the coming year.

The Alaskan governor never mentioned president-elect Barack Obama by name, but she took a swipe or two at the Democrat.

She also ruefully noted that Congress is led by the likes of House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid.

She said it was incumbent upon GOP governors to ensure that the federal government doesn't take over the health-care system or "err on the side of excess taxes."

She said if the next president and the new Congress goes in that direction "we have to show them the way."

Facing the prospect of being out of power at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue for the first time since 1992, Republicans are looking to their governors to fill the leadership vacuum.

Kabul still in upheaval

AFGHANISTAN Seven years ago yesterday, people celebrated in the streets of Kabul as members of the Northern alliance rolled into the capital of Afghanistan, driving the Taliban and their al Qaeda allies into hiding.

Fast forward to today and that blinding optimism is but a glimmer, while pessimism, gloom and despair appear to be rising.

Despite NATO's counter-insurgency efforts and efforts by humanitarian groups to build schools and hospitals, the Taliban remains a fixture.

"Clearly, after seven years, one might expect a little bit more of that measured progress," Canadian Brig.-Gen. Denis Thompson, commander of Task Force Kandahar, told The Canadian Press.

Prince Charles the longest-waiting British heir

By the time he turns 60 today, Prince Charles will have spent a lifetime in line to become king.

The longest-waiting heir in British history will only ascend to the throne when his beloved mother dies or decides to step down.

The Queen was hosting a birthday party for her son yesterday at Buckingham Palace. The Philharmonia Orchestra, of which the prince is patron, is due to play for invited members of the extended Royal Family and assorted society figures.

Charles' wife Camilla is throwing a more private bash tomorrow at the prince's rural estate, complete with a performance by sexagenarian rocker Rod Stewart.

But the Queen won't be giving Charles the present many believe he craves most — the crown. The Queen has indicated informally she plans to keep the job for life and some people think the 82-year-old monarch intends to live forever, or at least as long as her mother, who died at 101.

"It can't be easy," said historian Andrew Roberts.

"Most of us can look forward to our new jobs but the circumstances under which her reign comes to an end means that he can't, emotionally and psychologically."

Somali insurgents close in on capital

CONFLICT Advancing ever closer to Somalia's beleaguered capital, Islamic insurgents declared yesterday they will use strict Muslim rules to restore order to areas of the lawless Horn of Africa country now back under their control.

The latest conquest by Islamic forces came late Wednesday in Elasha, just over 15 kilometres from the capital of Mogadishu, when the government-backed militia ran without a fight.

Thousands of people who have fled Somalia's bloody, two-year insurgency are living in Elasha in flimsy huts made of sticks and tarp.

Islamic fighters now control most of southern and central Somalia, with the crucial exceptions of Mogadishu and Baidoa, where the parliament for Somalia's weak western- and UN-backed government sits.

MYANMAR Courts in Myanmar have sentenced 13 more political activists to prison in an ongoing judicial crackdown on the country's pro-democracy movement. Follieri complains of jail conditions

CRIME Raffaello Follieri, who went from dating actress Anne Hathaway to serving a prison term for fraud, says conditions are "unspeakably unsanitary" at the U.S. federal prison where he is being held.

Follieri's lawyer sent a letter to a judge this week complaining about the facility in Brooklyn, N.Y., saying things are so bad they have made Follieri ill. So far he has had a fever, blood in his urine, intestinal problems and shortness of breath.

Edwards asked the judge to have the 30-year-old Italian con man transferred back to the federal jail in Manhattan where he was previously held. The judge asked the government to look into Follieri's complaints.

Follieri was sentenced to 4½ years in prison in October after pleading guilty to cheating investors out of millions of dollars by falsely claiming he had Vatican connections that enabled him to buy church property at a discount.

Stormy forecast

Brown pollution clouds threat to Earth

Thick brown clouds of soot, particles and chemicals stretching from the Persian Gulf to Asia threaten health and food supplies in the world, the UN reported yesterday.

The regional haze, known as atmospheric brown clouds, contributes to glacial melting, reduces sunlight and helps create extreme weather conditions that affect agricultural production, said the report commissioned by the UN Environment Program.

The huge plumes have darkened 13 megacities in Asia — including Beijing, Shanghai, Bangkok, Cairo, Mumbai and New Delhi — sharply "dimming" the amount of light by as much as 25 per cent in some places.

Caused by the burning of fossil fuels, wood and plants, the brown clouds also play a significant role in exacerbating the effects of greenhouse gases, the report said. Some particles within the pollution cloud, absorb sunlight and heat the air. That has led to a steady melting of the Himalayan glaciers, which are the source of most of the major rivers on the continent, the report also said.

The enormous cloud masses can move across continents within three to four days, illustrating the fact the phenomenon is not just a regional urban issue but a global one, said lead scientist Veerabhadran Ramanathan, with the Scripps Institution of Oceanography at the University of California in San Diego.

"The main message is that it's a global problem. This is not a problem where we point fingers at our neighbours," he said.

HIV scandal hits Chile

HEALTH Chile is scrambling to reach people who could unknowingly spread HIV.

Health Minister Alvaro Erazo told legislators yesterday that public health services failed to tell 512 people that they had tested positive for HIV. Erazo added private-sector services failed to inform an estimated 1,700 more of their HIV-positive status.

Chile's public health service says some patients provided incorrect addresses, but in about half the cases there is no evidence anyone tried to reach them.

Erazo was summoned to Congress to explain after the scandal forced his predecessor to resign.

A political hangover

OmniVision

rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

After the smoke, fire and histrionics of the U.S. election, intensified only briefly and slightly by our own federal campaign, the mood of the headlines and both countries has subsided into a mood resembling Sunday morning following a big bender.

The Republican party's defeat has prompted what's referred to as a circular firing squad, with everyone blaming everyone else, with Sarah Palin being singled out in particular — and tediously predictable — for blame, though it turned out that many of the unnamed John McCain campaign workers cited by supposedly reputable media like MSNBC and The New Republic as sources for the worst accusations were the work of a longtime hoaxer. It's been that kind of a week.

It hardly matters anyway, since confidence in mainstream media coverage is at an all-time low, and newspapers such as the Washington Post have published shamefaced admissions that their coverage of the campaign might have been, on reflection, a little biased. That won't stop the frenzy of kidney punches and kneecappings inside and outside the Republican party, though that might be a good thing; the party that ran this election might just as well forward all the campaign speeches of its next candidate to Saturday Night Live's writer's room in advance.

In the meantime, there are fleeting glimpses that the much-anticipated "Change" promised by the winning candidate might not be as earth-shattering as expected, as the president-elect's prospective choices for cabinet positions are thick with Clinton-era veterans, a pre-chewed meal that hardly smells like the prelude to a revolution, though we may all be grateful for that.

There's a crude poetry to the tradition of holding presidential inaugurations in mid-winter, where the likelihood of a swearing-in on the U.S. Capitol steps in the teeth of inclement weather is ripe with portents of the trials ahead. Between now and then, however, Barack Obama is limited to playing at president while the media (hopefully) begins shifting gears from lapdog to peevish teenager, while George W. Bush has little to do but taunt Dick Cheney by suggesting they hire Will Ferrell to stand in for him so he can head home early.

There's a curse, apocryphally attributed to some unknown Chinese sage and too frequently evoked by lazy editorialists, that wishes that the subject "live in interesting times." I was born eight months after the Kennedy assassination, six days after Lyndon Johnson signed the Civil Rights Act, and have lived in interesting times my whole life. I long — with little expectation of satisfaction by now — for a year or two of Eisenhower-era political torpor and complacency, if only to catch up on my reading. These two months of doldrums might be the closest I'll get.

Choosing the correct economic direction

By BEVERLY TOPPING

Meltdown. Recession. Crash. Depression. Most of us thought something like this was never going to happen again and that our economic system would continue to produce gains, albeit with the occasional slowdown.

The current global economic meltdown is continuing to produce tremors around the world. The implications for countries, businesses and individuals continue to unfold. When will it all come to an end? This is very difficult to predict, but my sense is that we have a way to go yet.

Many countries around the world are experiencing slower, if any, growth in their economies. Our biggest trading partner, the U.S., shows every evidence of a lengthy recession. When the U.S. falters, we can expect adverse impacts here at home. Indeed, we are already seeing some signs of this in terms of a stagnant GDP and layoffs in financial services firms among others. When credit tightens, businesses — especially small- and medium-sized enterprises — have a difficult time financing their current operations or expanding to take advantage of new opportunities.

Beverly Topping

Why did this financial crisis happen? There have been thousands of words written about this already and I suspect there will be many thousands more. Fingers have been pointing in every direction: Governments, central bankers, regulators, financial services firms, individual borrowers, and the list goes on, including directors of companies.

To our credit, Canada has had an impressive track record regarding corporate governance. Indeed, the process of raising the bar for corporate directors in Canada continues to gain momentum. The Institute of Corporate Directors (ICD) is dedicated to strengthening corporate governance through education, awareness, training and certification. We know that better directors make for better boards and that leads to stronger corporate performance.

Unlike the U.S., Canada has not seen any financial services company implode and none are teetering on the brink. Our boards and company managements seem to have avoided the excesses we have seen elsewhere. Nevertheless, they are under pressure arising from external events, and governments have rightly moved in to stabilize matters.

I am confident Canada will come through this crisis with even stronger corporate governance. At the ICD, we will identify the lessons learned — be they in risk management, executive compensation, strategic decision-making, financial management, information disclosure or other governance areas — and ensure they are foremost in the minds of directors going forward.

Re: Security in high schools

I am very tired of us as a society acting shocked when something like a stabbing or shooting happens. Why won't we see the problem for what it is — it's a larger problem than a shooting or stabbing in a school. We need to look beyond that effect and see the cause.

One hundred police officers in a school will not bring change. Change comes from the individual.

Mick Levin, HALIFAX

Only when the last tree has died and the last river been poisoned and the last fish been caught will we realize we cannot eat money, says a proverb of the Cree people.

If there's one thing the rich and powerful can agree on, it is that they all wish to remain rich and powerful. Response to the recent global financial crisis was swift, significant, and expensive.

In contrast, the response to the climate crisis has been fragmented, ineffective, and marginalized, with the major players deadlocked in disagreement on how to proceed.

The global response to the financial crisis illustrates that world leaders have the ability to combat climate change in a meaningful and co-operative way.

Re: Addressing an elephant (Nov. 12)

Paul Sullivan asks a bizarre question that we heard before and during the election, namely: "What kind of country allows a separatist party to hold the balance of power?"

Surely the answer is obvious: A democratic country. What is he advocating here — banning political parties whose views some people don't like?

That's ridiculous and hardly worthy of taking up space in your paper.

OECD in recession?

Group says members' economies shrinking

The Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development reported yesterday that its 30-member area, representing the world's developed economies, "appears to have entered recession."

The Paris-based group forecast the economy of OECD countries as a whole will contract by 0.3 per cent in 2009, before returning to growth in 2010.

The OECD sees the U.S. economy shrinking by 0.9 per cent next year. It is also forecasting that economic activity in countries that use the euro and in Japan will fall in 2009 by 0.5 per cent and 0.1 per cent, respectively.

"The severity of this economic contraction is a once-in-a-hundred-year phenomenon."
Donald Brean

"The severity of this economic contraction is a once-in-a-hundred-year phenomenon," said Donald Brean, a professor of finance and economics at the Rotman School of Management at the University of Toronto. "It really does compare in severity to the Depression of the late 1920s and through the '30s." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Nortel on road to bankruptcy: Analyst

RISK Bankruptcy for Nortel Networks Corp. "is a distinct possibility," an RBC Capital Markets analyst said yesterday, marking down his share-price target for the telecommunications equipment maker to zero.

Nortel has $2.65 billion US in cash "but is overwhelmed with debt and burning cash," Mark Sue noted.

Sue suggested that without a government bailout or a major financial investment Nortel may run of out cash before $1 billion in bonds mature in 2011.

He reduced his share-price target to zero, from $1.50.

U.S. jobless claims hit seven-year high
The number of newly laid-off Americans seeking unemployment benefits has jumped to a seven-year high. Jobless claims last week increased by 32,000 to 516,000 — the highest since the 9/11 attacks, and second highest since 1992. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Taxpayers pan auto bailout

The federal and Ontario governments should stop "perpetual handouts" to struggling domestic auto makers, says the Canadian Taxpayers Federation.

General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and parts makers are seeking financial assistance from Ottawa and the province to stay alive but the federation said yesterday those companies need radical restructuring, not more government aid.

"Taxpayers cannot afford to continue to bail out mismanaged companies that expect perpetual handouts in good and bad times," said Adam Taylor, the group's acting federal director, in a statement.

"The Big Three's demand for tax dollars occurs as regularly as these same companies shed shifts and jobs and it's time to put a stop to throwing good money after bad. Thousands of layoffs have shown clearly that these subsidies are not working."

The federation claims GM, Ford and Chrysler have received $782 million in loans and future commitments since 2003 from Canadian taxpayers.

Banks not using cash for lending?

BAILOUT Members of the U.S. Congress complained yesterday that banks haven't used the $163 billion US infusion of capital, already received or promised by the U.S. government, to open credit lines for more lending.

"Banks are inclined to hoard rather than to deploy capital," charged Sen. Charles Schumer.

Congress is looking at making banks show they have increased their lending in order to share in the $350 billion Phase 2 part of the bailout plan.

Loblaw profit may signal beginning of turnaround

Loblaw Cos. posted better than expected profits and sales in its latest quarter but said it continues to face challenges within its business.

The country's largest supermarket chain said earnings jumped 32.5 per cent to $155 million. Sales grew 3.9 per cent. The company said its results benefited from improved efficiencies in merchandise buying, cost management and operating procedures.

The company has been in trouble ever since Wal-Mart Canada entered the fresh food business. To compete, Loblaw began opening larger stores that also carried non-food merchandise. But the strategy backfired as its warehouses became clogged and store shelves sat empty while costs soared.

In an effort to get back on track, Loblaw has been returning to its roots, slashing non-food merchandise, renovating existing stores and unclogging its distribution system.

The potential life of Brian

Burke has plenty of options; Leafs job would likely involve Colangelo-like powers

Brian Burke is a wanted man. Cases are being made in at least nine NHL cities for his services, and that's not counting the Toronto Maple Leafs, the team where most NHL observers expect him to land as president and general manager.

Burke's appeal is immense. He is being portrayed as one of the top executives in the NHL and his availability at mid-season likely has several organizations scrambling to see if he is a fit in their front office. Burke represents a rare opportunity.

His flare and no-nonsense brand of hockey is already causing him to be portrayed as a potential folk hero in hard-nosed hockey towns like Boston and Philadelphia. He has close ties to people like Glen Sather in New York, Roy Mlakar in Ottawa, and Harry Sinden and Peter Chiarelli in Boston.

New Englander Brian Burke is also a candidate to helm Boston.

The list of potential, non-Toronto options for Burke include Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Ottawa and the Rangers, with longer odds on Atlanta, Tampa, Florida, and the Islanders.

As an alternative option to the Leafs, Boston appears an almost perfect fit. Burke's son works for the Philadelphia Flyers out of Boston, and his daughter attends a local high school.

The leading factor in Burke's departure from Anaheim stemmed from the fact he worked for a team that was so far away from the four children he has from his first marriage, all of who live in the Boston area. In Toronto, there appears to be no contest there, if the model of the Raptors' Bryan Colangelo is used. According to a source, Colangelo isn't required to clear any moves with the MLSE board as long as they remain under budget.

While it is widely expected Burke will land in Toronto, the Leafs have no way of trying to gain a competitive advantage in their pursuit of the free agent executive.

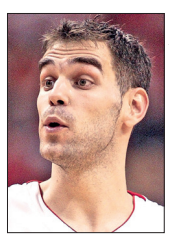
Break for Calderon, Raptors

Jose Calderon has been poked, prodded and examined and it turns out the best thing for his sore right hamstring is rest. Luckily for the Raptors, they have some time.

"This is the first time we've had three or four days off," Calderon said after sitting out the final quarter of Wednesday's 106-96 loss to the Philadelphia 76ers. After a grind that had the Raptors playing five games in eight days — winning only once — they are off until Sunday afternoon when they meet the Miami Heat at the Air Canada Centre.



Calderon

Calderon had an MRI yesterday on his hamstring, which he said cramped up late in the first quarter on Wednesday and then bothered him again later in the game. Team officials said doctors were looking over the results and there would be no official word on his status until the team returns to work today.

Bills sticking by Trent Edwards despite woes

Trent Edwards is not regressing. He's maturing.

That's the firm explanation provided by Buffalo Bills coach Dick Jauron in defence of his second-year quarterback, who's suddenly finding how difficult it is to consistently play at an elite level.

"You're going to have highs and lows. You're going to suffer a lot. You're going to get defeated a lot," Jauron said Wednesday. "I don't have any doubts about Trent Edwards. He's going to be fine." Jauron's vote of confidence comes at a critical juncture for both the ongoing development of Edwards and for a Bills team (5-4) that's suddenly reeling, having lost three straight — all to AFC East rivals — and four of five, in preparing to host Cleveland (3-6) on Monday night. If the Bills are going to turn around this skid, it has to start with an offence that's stuck in neutral, prone to making mistakes, and looking nothing like the efficient unit that helped the team get off to a 5-1 start. In his first six games, Edwards went 106-of-152 for 1,209 yards with five touchdowns, two interceptions and two lost fumbles. In his past three, Edwards has gone 58-of-93 for 636 yards with two TDs, five interceptions, two lost fumbles and has given up a safety.

Trent Edwards has thrown five picks and fumbled twice in his last three games.

"Bad habits," Edwards said. "I'm going to look to myself, I'm not going to look to the other guys ... I need to change as fast as possible." Edwards, who earned the starting job ahead of J.P. Losman midway through last season, maintains the support of his teammates. "It's just the growing pains of a young quarterback," receiver Lee Evans said. "We keep him going. We keep him positive. And he knows that we go as he goes."

Couture, Lesnar talk some smack

UFC The strategy for UFC heavyweight champion Randy (The Natural) Couture appears simple tomorrow night at UFC 91 — put Brock Lesnar where he hasn't been before.

The 31-year-old Lesnar has only had three mixed martial arts fights (including two in the UFC). He fell victim to a leg submission in a UFC debut loss to former heavyweight champion Frank Mir and had the upper hand from the get-go in his decision win over Herring. Lesnar has shown great raw skill, but not been tested in certain areas in his young MMA career. As the 45-year-old Couture notes, he has yet to be in a "firefight."

"I think I have the ability to put him in a whole bunch of places," Couture said Wednesday after working up a sweat in a media workout.

"Randy Couture will test him," added Couture trainer Shawn Tompkins, a native of London, Ont. "He'll hurt him, he'll hit him and he won't be there when Brock wants to hit him."

Still, Couture (16-8) will be giving up 14 years and probably 50 pounds when the two meet at the MGM Grand Garden Arena. The 6-foot-2 Couture has only fought twice since losing to Chuck (The Iceman) Liddell at UFC 57 in February 2006, coming out of retirement to upset heavyweight champion Tim Sylvia and then stopping Gabriel Gonzaga.

Both camps have been diplomatic in the leadup to this fight. The normally brash Lesnar was on his best behaviour Wednesday, although he did manage a shot at Couture.

"By the looks of it, to me, Randy looks like he took a year off," Lesnar sniped. "But we're not underestimating Randy Couture. Not at all. He's a pioneer, he's the man. He's got something I dearly want, pretty bad."

Couture is also not averse to pushing a few Lesnar buttons. "I think in a lot of ways that brash kind of bravado is covering up a little of the insecurities that he's carrying into this fight because he knows he doesn't have all the skills that he needs." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Randy Couture fights Brock Lesnar tomorrow night at UFC 91.

The Calgary Stampeders and Montreal Alouettes will buck a weird CFL trend if they win their division finals at home tomorrow. Strangely, visiting teams have won the CFL's past four playoff games, all as underdogs. Almost as bizarre — or perhaps more bizarre — is that Michael Bishop was the losing quarterback in two of those four games. He was the Toronto Argonauts' QB when they lost to the Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Eastern semifinal last season and was the Roughriders' QB when they lost to the B.C. Lions in the Western semifinal last Saturday. Saskatchewan released Bishop immediately after the loss. "The Roughriders might still be playing," CFL guru Jack Morrow cracked, "if they'd been as quick to remove Bishop during the game as they were afterwards."

• The selection yesterday of Montreal's Anthony Calvillo as an offensive all-star should tip you off on who will be chosen the CFL's most-outstanding player this season ... Calvillo would be the CFL's comeback player as well — if the league had such an award ... Wes Cates was traded by Calgary to Saskatchewan before last season because he couldn't supplant Joffrey Reynolds as the Stampeders' running back. Yesterday, Cates and Reynolds were chosen the CFL's all-star running backs ... The Als' Jamel Richardson, who couldn't establish himself as a mainstay during his years in Saskatchewan, became Calvillo's favourite target this season and became one of the CFL's all-star receivers yesterday. He's telling friends he intends to bolt to the NFL in the off-season ... For my playoff picks, incidentally, visit www.metronews.ca for my latest CFL Report.

• Orlando Hudson, discarded by the Blue Jays before becoming an all-star second baseman in the NL, is No. 1 on the New York Mets' wish list of free agents, which means he's in for megabucks. Atop the Jays' wish list, as reported here before, is the cantankerous Milton Bradley, who has a personal policy of never smiling.

The interest in the slugger puzzles Jays fan Ajoy Pinto, Metro's marketing and promotions specialist. From the stands, Pinto once shouted this at Bradley: "You suck at the game of life," which, of course, was a not-so-subtle reference to the other Milton Bradley, who invented games for a living. Suffice it to say that Bradley didn't smile when he heard Pinto's observation.

• And get this: Men needing to pee during their golf games will no longer need to visit a washroom. No joke. A Florida-based urologist has invented a golf club that doubles as a urinal. Seems the urologist heard too many complaints from male golfers. For details and photos, visit www.uroclub.org.

Music City man

• A routine has turned into a superstition for Tennessee quarterback Kerry Collins, who has revealed that he has listened to country music star Alan Jackson's Good Time every day on the way to work and back home since the beginning of his team's win streak. The Titans, at 9-0, are the NFL's only undefeated team this season.

Bond tuneless

Newest 007 entry has plenty of action, but movie is deliberately anticlimactic

Quantum of Solace
Director: Marc Forster
Stars: Daniel Craig, Olga Kurylenko
Classification: PG
Rating:

RICK MCGINNIS
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

The best Bond films have always lived up to their theme song, and unfortunately the blaring — but tuneless — Jack White/Alicia Keys intro to Quantum of Solace too ably sets the tone for what follows.

The movie starts literally minutes after its predecessor, Casino Royale, ended, with a pre-credit car chase that sums up director Marc Forster's brisk approach to the story.

Action scenes are the meat of Bond movies. Most of what we see in Quantum of Solace is at least as good as the standards set in previous films; relentless, and more than a bit improbable — if done properly.

One scene, set during an opera performance, is actually groundbreaking, an almost abstract action set piece that owes its success as much to sound editing as stunt work.

There seems to be a bit missing from the film, though. It's short for a Bond film, and the deliberately anticlimactic ending makes the experience on the whole a lot less draining — and thrilling — than the best of the series.

Politics intrudes with the clumsy, didactic gracelessness that's a hallmark of too many movies today. Though, the film's basic flaw is intrinsic to the story, which is focused around an emotionally wounded Bond with little time — or inclination — for the reckless pleasures or black humour that have defined the character in the other movies.

Daniel Craig's Bond is still an excellent incarnation of the character, and the decision to beef up Judi Dench's role as M, his spymaster, is paying subtle dividends that will, hopefully, start paying off more generously in the next film — which will start gracing us with a new Q, or a Moneypenny, at the very least.

Bond, played by Daniel Craig, is back in Quantum of Solace.

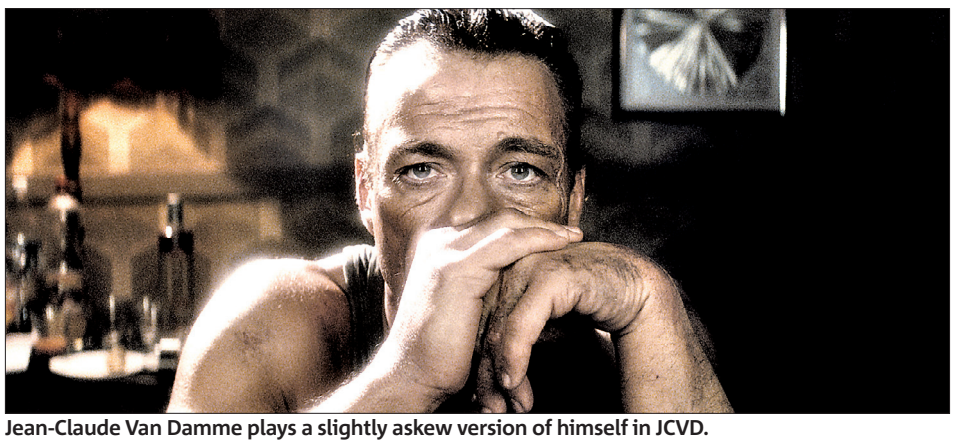
JCVD has a slick, stylish and unabashed approach

JCVD
Director: Mabrouk El-Mechri
Stars: Jean-Claude Van Damme
Classification: 14A
Rating:

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada



Jean-Claude Van Damme plays a slightly askew version of himself in JCVD.

REVIEW Dolph Lundgren is probably banging his head against a wall somewhere. After all, the struggling has-been action star has had to sit and watch his former Universal Soldier co-star, Jean-Claude Van Damme, enjoy a huge renaissance of popularity with an acclaimed turn in JCVD. That can't be fun.

By playing a slightly-askew version of himself, Van Damme not only self-deprecatingly mocks his depleted action hero status but, by doing so, some critics are predicting he may actually salvage his slumming career.

Set in the aftermath of a child custody battle, JCVD returns the Muscles from Brussels to the sanctuary of Belgium where he soon finds himself in the middle of a robbery-gone-wrong. While cops mistakenly accuse the star of an escalating hostage situation, Van Damme struggles with the elements that have steered him to this bizarre crossroads.

With a slick, stylish and unabashed approach, it's clear that director Mabrouk El-Mechri both reveres and roasts his former movie idol. Better yet, El-Mechri gives him the soapbox on which to tell his story.

And Van Damme is the real deal here. With disarming likeability, he casts a spell over his audience with a compelling mix of self-parody and sentimentality. I defy anyone not to feel for the dude after sitting through a shocking, surreal seven minute monologue lamenting lost fame, family and fortune.

JCVD isn't just an amazing turnabout for Van Damme; it's a fascinating and hilarious study of celebrity and middle-aged angst at large. While Van Damme may stun audiences with a dramatic dropkick, I wouldn't go so far as to forecast that JCVD will restore the actor to the A-list: Having just signed up to make Universal Soldier III, it would seem old habits die hard in the withering world of washups.

Twilight soundtrack debuts at No. 1

Quote of the week

"It was an hour-and-a-half drive out to the set, and it was a rough road just to get there. Then you work a full 12-hour day and then you drive all the way back, an hour-and-a-half. I just thought, 'I don't know how I'm going to do this and still be good at what I do, and not collapse from the heat' ... "Within a week there, something happened ... you get hypnotized by it. Twilight fans have high hopes

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

When someone mentions Stephenie Meyer's teen novel phenomena Twilight, the title sparks one of two reactions: Either an excited rant from a member of one of the world's most devoted fan bases, or a blank stare.

Twilight has already sold more than 17 million copies, and the cinematic adaptation being released next week will likely follow with a new run up the book charts.

Don't feel bad if you haven't heard of the series. It probably just means you're not a teenage girl — barely anyone involved with the film had heard of it, either.

"I did not read the books. (The script) was forced on me," says Kristen Stewart, who plays Bella in the film.

Bella is a young girl who moves to a new town and immediately falls for a high school classmate. However, things get a little complicated when it turns out that her dream boy is actually a vampire struggling to decide if he wants to kiss her or sink his teeth into her neck.

Twilight, based on the teen novel by Stephenie Meyer, gets its cinematic release next week.

Movie feature

"I didn't like the outline because it seemed very shallow and vain to me, like Bella was in love with this guy just because he was the hottest thing she had ever seen. But when I finally read the script, I begged to get the audition," Stewart says.

"I'd never heard of the books," adds Melissa Rosenberg, who wrote the screenplay.

"(Comic Con) was the first time I really understood just how huge this was and a cold sweat came over me when they were about to play a clip and I realized that I didn't do it exactly like it was in the book.

"You don't want to be the person who killed Twilight for a generation."

Despite the lack of familiarity on the part of some of the movie's creators — many of whom have since become fans of the book — reaction to their work among Twilight readers has been positive so far.

"It's been fascinating because some people have said this is the most true adaptation of a novel they've ever seen," said director Catherine Hadwicke, who also made the indie teen flick Thirteen.

"I love that because it's true to the notions and the spirit, but it's not true to the book in many ways. We interpreted it and tried to make it visual, emotional, dynamic and cinematic. I'd say I put my own stamp on every scene."

The filmmakers' work is eagerly anticipated by the legions of fans that have shown up in droves for every early screening held so far. No one involved with the movie expected anything like this level of reaction.

"The crowds of people screaming makes you want to cry," Stewart said.

Halifax-based director Michael Melski talks on the set of Growing Op with actor Steven Yafee.

Growing up

Director pulls on own history for coming-of-age film

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

Movie feature

Suburban teen Quinn Dawson has problems. He's a social stray who has no idea how to interact with his peers and can't relate to his workaholic parents.

See, to Quinn's eternal shame, mom and dad's line of work just happens to be running the mother-of-all marijuana grow-ops in the family living room. Worse, they fully expect their home-schooled son to carry on the counter-culture family business.

That's the premise of Halifax-born writer/director Michael Melski's new coming of age comedy Growing Op — a film that intimately charts the plight of the average teenage boy raised in a decidedly offbeat environment.

"I grew up in the John Hughes era," says Melski of his '80s-weaned youth. "But with this film I was more concerned with updating those kind of teen film into the 21st century. The real fun in Growing Op is seeing Quinn attempt to leave his home environment, which he thinks is so amoral and strange, and enter into a far more fearsome one … high school."

"I had an ex-girlfriend whose father had a massive grow-op in his barn and he treated it like his wine-making project and not criminal cultivation."
Director Michael Melski

Melski based his film partially on fact, and — although in many respects Quinn (as played by Steven Yafee) recalls the quintessential movie geek heartthrob heights of a Say Anything period John Cusack — the filmmaker is adamant that the character is a mirror of his own teenage past.

"Quinn's very much who I was," Melski says. "He's this honest kid who yearns for normalcy. The story has its roots in truth too.

"I had an ex-girlfriend whose father had a massive grow-op in his barn and he treated it like his wine-making project and not criminal cultivation. It was really bizarre to see this man shower his plants with more affection than he gave to his daughter."

Warmly received at both the Atlantic and Vancouver Film Festivals, Growing Op — it also features cult actress Rosanna Arquette as Quinn's hemp harvesting mom — opens theatrically in Toronto and Vancouver next Friday. After that, Melski is in negotiations to bring the picture to the U.S., though he has his concerns about the prospect.

"We're hoping to get the film some U.S. play dates," Melski says. "My only fear is that it doesn't get stopped at the border for fear of pot in the film cans, or something."

Brolin has arrived

Actor has string of outstanding performances

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

He has been acting for nearly a quarter century — making his an adolescent debut in the cult classic The Goonies — but most people knew Josh Brolin best because of his famous father and stepmother: James Brolin and Barbra Streisand.

Thanks to a string of outstanding performances in a diverse lineup of films (Grindhouse, American Gangster, No Country For Old Men, W., and the upcoming Milk), Brolin has not only managed to step out of his parental shadows, but also establish himself as one of the finest actors of his generation.

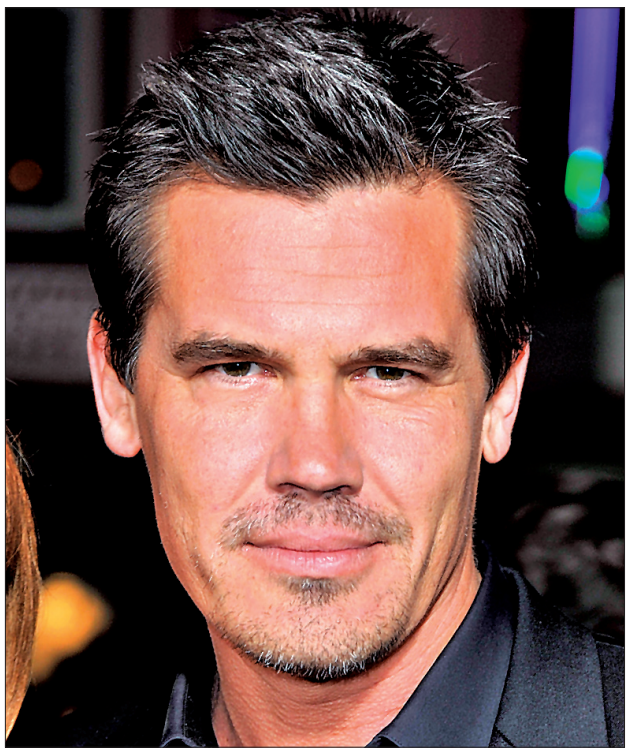
It is an experience the actor admits he always pined for.

"I always wanted to work with great filmmakers," Brolin said. "I started out working with a really amazing filmmaker and was extremely spoiled by my first experience. Then the next time it happened was with David O. Russell on Flirting With Disaster. I remember watching that movie thinking, 'Thank God I'm in this film.'"

The latest directing talent to enlist Brolin is Gus Van Sant, for whom he plays Dan White in the upcoming Milk, a bio-pic about America's first openly gay politician, Harvey Milk.

"Gus sent the script to me and I read it immediately," said Brolin, who plays a fellow politician who kills Milk. "I cried at the end. I was very moved by it and said yes right away."

Milk marks the second time this year that Brolin has played a controversial political figure. It follows his amazing portrayal of George Bush in Oliver Stone's W.



Josh Brolin always wanted to work with "great filmmakers."

Movie feature

"It's harder in that there's some form of wanting to do it justice, especially with Bush," Brolin said about portraying an actual person. "He's so in everybody's psyche and there's so much hatred and dislike for him globally. That was a little disconcerting to me, but it was also part of the great challenge."

In both roles, Brolin managed to rouse a surprising amount of sympathy for fairly disreputable figures. The actor considers this vital.

"I think it's important for any character to come across as human unless you're doing a caricature. I find it important to care about what the person is going through. I think it's more interesting to ask 'Why?' instead of just saying 'Oh look at that.'

"I could have played Dan White as he was the moment he decided to get the gun to go and kill those people, but that would have been very one dimensional."

Given his sudden rise to prominence, it seems likely that Brolin will be collecting a few awards this year to cement his new movie star status.

It's rare for an actor to become a star purely through the strength of idiosyncratic performances, but no one deserves it more than Brolin. The actor paid his dues for decades and has earned his right to the spotlight.

Documentary poster perfect

Died Young Stayed Pretty

Director: Eileen Yaghoobian
Classification: 14A
Rating:

JIM REYNO
jim.reyno@metronews.ca

REVIEW Died Young Stayed Pretty is Canadian filmmaker Eileen Yaghoobian's first full-length creation, and it is as much a work of quirky art as a lot of her subject matter is.

Yaghoobian's 94-minute documentary is subtitled A Movie About Rock Posters! She examines the underground world of poster art by mixing plenty of examples of their work with lots of interviews of the artists, who take great pride in being outside the mainstream.

Several artists compare what they do to punk rock: "Art to destroy other art." Using silkscreening and photocopying as part of their arsenal, they frequently take pop-culture images, mangle them to make their own comment on the mainstream, staple them on lampposts, and tell you about a coming rock concert at the same time.

Some of these people come off as thoughtful social observers, some come off as more-alternative-than-thou elitists. Several of the artists interviewed seem like the type of people who would pledge allegiance to a band — until that band became popular. Then they'd accuse the band of selling out.

Yaghoobian does very little editing of the footage, so what we get is raw and occasionally delightfully unfocused, just like real life. But sometimes, it's just unfocused. Shots of the posters often move so quickly and are so tight, we don't get an appreciation for the artwork as a whole.

Part of the appeal of Died Young Stayed Pretty is the odd, original music by Mark Greenberg, which enhances Yaghoobian's filmmaking approach.

Milk a timely film, cast says

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Movie feature

As the first openly gay elected official in the United States, Harvey Milk's achievements were revolutionary — breaking down a number of huge barriers in the 1970s before he was assassinated.

Director Gus Van Sant's new biopic Milk — starring Sean Penn — couldn't have come at a better time. The film is being released just weeks after California passed a proposal that Milk would have done everything in his power to prevent.

Last week, voters in California voted "Yes" to Proposition 8; officially declaring marriage as an institution between a man and a woman, and overturning an earlier ruling recognizing same-sex marriages in the state.

"There's a ground parallel between Prop 8 and Milk," says Josh Brolin, who appears in the film as Harvey's assassin Dan White. "I felt like we'd evolved and the gay community and gay society had finally gone mainstream. Then something like this happens, which was a huge surprise to me. I mean, in California of all places."

Milk was going to be an important film before Proposition 8 passed, but now it practically feels like required viewing for a country that made Will And Grace one of the most successful shows on television while still relegating the lifestyle it represents to the margins of society.

"I watched some of the 'Yes On 8" ads and I was surprised by the similarities to the arguments in our movie, like the recruitment of children in schools to the gay lifestyle," says Canadian actress Alison Pill, who plays Milk's campaign manager Anne Kronenberg.

GETTY IMAGES
Actor Sean Penn arrives at the premiere of his new movie, Milk.

Kronenberg helped to elect Milk to public office in San Francisco, defeating evangelical Senator John Briggs' attempt to ban homosexuals from teaching in Californian public schools.

"All I could think was, 'Are we still having this argument?'" adds Pill. "I hope that this movie can help change people's minds on the issue."

Milk's screenwriter Dustin Lance Black is the person involved with the film who is most passionate about the issue — he is an openly gay man living in California. Black feels there is an element of Harvey Milk's political approach sorely missing in contemporary gay rights campaigns.

"When you see the film you see that there is a very different strategy to defeating anti-gay proposition in the movie than there is now. Harvey had his 'out-of-the-closet' campaign, which was a theme for him, self-representation," said Black. "That was missing in the campaign for Proposition 8 … We never introduced ourselves and said, 'Hey, we're who you're taking away from.'"

Bond knock-offs a genre themselves

InFocus

Richard Crouse
mrchaos33@hotmail.com

This week, you can't throw a steel-brimmed hat without hitting a billboard or poster for Quantum of Solace. Daniel Craig's mug is so omnipresent, it's impossible to get a quantum of relief from his stern but handsome mug.

It seems the whole world has gone Bond crazy, but this is nothing new. James Bond — and whoever is playing the super spy — has always been big news, but there is only so much of him to go around.

That's why enterprising filmmakers have frequently retooled the Bondian formula of guns, girls and gadgets to attract new audiences.

During the late 1960s wave of Bondmania, Dean Martin staggered through a quartet of spy spoofs based on the literary character Matt Helm, giving new meaning to the advertising tagline "America's Loaded Weapon."

Since then, the Bond knock-off business has boomed and 007 wannabes in all shapes and sizes have blossomed. There's adolescent Bond in Agent Cody Banks, a version for teens called xXx ("Now I know what xXx stands for: Xtremely Xcruciating Xperience" raved one critic) and parodies like Get Smart and Austin Powers.

Wilder still is Operation Kid Brother. In a blatant attempt to satisfy audience's need for all things Bond in 1967, producers cast Sean Connery's younger brother Neil as a plastic surgeon and hypnotist recruited by Her Majesty's Secret Service to thwart the evil crime syndicate Thanatos. He's called into action, the movie explains, because Sean's brother Neil Connery starred in Operation Kid Brother.

"his brother is out on a routine mission."

Wow, perfect casting! Except Neil can't act. The film flopped so badly it could have been the reason bargain bins were invented, and Neil soon returned to his former job as a plasterer. But Operation Kid Brother does have its pleasures.

Bond alumnus Bernard Lee and Lois Maxwell ham it up alongside From Russia with Love's Bond girl Daniela Bianchi, and Thunderball villain Adolfo Celi. Better than that is the soundtrack by Ennio Morricone, which unlike the rest of the film, is on par with a real Bond film.

The Connery name will always be associated with Bond, and while Neil (thankfully) retired soon after Operation Kid Brother, other Connerys had a harder time letting the character go.

Sean revived his Bond after a 12-year layoff in 1983's Never Say Never Again and as a voice in video games — and his son, Jason Connery, played 007's creator in The Secret Life of Ian Fleming.

Richard Crouse is the author of Son of the 100 Best Movies You've Never Seen and film critic for CTV's Canada AM.

European Film Fest starts Sunday

FESTIVAL The fourth annual European Film Festival runs in Toronto from Sunday to Nov. 30, presenting 30 films from 24 European countries.

"Toronto offers a broad choice of languages, cultures and food to discover: European cinema has to be part of it," said Joel Savary, cultural attaché at Consultate General of France in Toronto, who is acting as festival co-ordinator.

"The 2008 lineup is better than ever," she added.

Among the films featured is the French film The Class, winner of the Golden Palm at Cannes this year.

All screenings are free, including The Class on Sunday at two locations: Royal Cinema (608 College St. W) and Innis Town Hall (2 Sussex Ave.)

Beverly Hills Chihuahua

REVIEW These days, it seems Hollywood producers are all wondering the same thing: If my dog could speak, what would it say? Well, Beverly Hills Chihuahua is the latest talking animal flick to heed that query. Featuring the voices of Drew Barrymore, Andy Garcia and other celebs, Chihuahua is a harmless "tail" about a snooty, rich lapdog that gets lost in Mexico and must journey back to Rodeo Drive.

Body of Lies

REVIEW In director Ridley Scott's latest film, a CIA field agent (Leonardo DiCaprio) is not only tracking down an Osama bin Laden-like terrorist leader, but he's doing so under the guidance of stay-at-home chief Ed Hoffman (Russell Crowe). Observing Ferris' moves from the eyes of unmanned spy drones, Hoffman calls the shots over a Bluetooth in America.

Changeling

REVIEW Directed by legendary icon Clint Eastwood, Changeling tells the emotional journey of Christine Collins (Angelina Jolie), a single mother in 1920s Los Angeles who comes home to find her son missing. Following weeks of relentlessly searching, the police suddenly show up with her child, reporters in tow. Great. Only there's a catch: It ain't him.

Eagle Eye

REVIEW When Steven Spielberg first came up with the idea for Eagle Eye, it probably seemed like an outrageous science fiction story. Now, some 10 years later — and having handed the reins over to Disturbia director D.J. Caruso — Eagle Eye may be a high-octane, car crash-filled action flick, but it hardly contains the insightfulness of what it truly needs to work.

The Haunting of Molly Hartley

REVIEW The Haunting of Molly Hartley is a choppy, disjointed movie short on scares and story. It's like they couldn't wait to make a movie, so they plowed ahead with the production without developing a plot. The script is lazy: Stuff happens that isn't connected, you can see some events coming a mile away, and a baffling ending that explains nothing.

High School Musical 3: Senior Year

REVIEW It's very likely that only a handful of adults have seen the previous two High School Musical incarnations that follow the dancing and singing students of Albuquerque's Eastside High. Adults can actually attend the movie without too much fear. Sure, the storyline is very basic, and squeaky Mickey Mouse-clean — you may doze off occasionally — but there is great energy in this film.

Madagascar: Escape 2 Africa

REVIEW If it ain't broke, don't fix it. Yes, it's an archaic, overused adage, but when it comes to Madagascar: Escape 2 Africa, it also applies. The movie isn't without its improvements: It has plenty of jokes and inside gags for the adults but they're mostly just recycled sensibilities from the 2005 film. Of course, the story is what really counts, and Madagascar 2 tells too many tales.

Max Payne

REVIEW Max Payne is another hit video game-turned-Hollywood blockbuster. As the title character, Mark Wahlberg is an angry, maverick cop who is determined to find the savages who killed his wife and child. Shirking his civic duty, Payne conspires with a sexy assassin — Mila Kunis of That '70s Show — and discovers a dark underworld that may be connected to otherworldly demons.

Swift and Fearless

Country star opens up about her love life on new album

IAN NATHANSON
for Metro Canada

As Taylor Swift released her sophomore effort, Fearless, earlier this week, the country-pop songstress is fearlessly addressing some highly publicized rumours about her circulating in the U.S. media.

One reputedly claims that the 18-year-old is pregnant. Swift's response? False. "I'm really offended by this one," she tells Metro. "I'm not that kind of girl. After reading that, I just sat there thinking, 'What did I do to provoke that?' But then I found out that this kind of thing happens to a lot of girls in this industry — for no reason."

Another rumour alleges she was dating Joe Jonas, the middle sibling of teen heartthrobs The Jonas Brothers. Swift's response? True, but it's over now.

"I've always been very upfront with (Joe) and I've kept the relationship a secret for a very long time," Swift says days after revealing to People Magazine and on The Ellen De Generes Show that the 19-year-old dumped her in October. "I only addressed the issue because I felt I owed it to my fans. I wanted to say, 'Look, you guys weren't crazy, the breakup did happen. I made a few comments on it and now I'm ready to stop giving him my time and energy.'"

Nonetheless, her fascination with boys figures prominently throughout Fearless. While Forever And Always may be linked to her split with Jonas, Swift explains that another song, Hey Stephen, reveals a crush toward a real-life Stephen, whose last name she purposely keeps mum.

"He hasn't heard the song yet so that should make for an interesting phone call," Swift laughs. "When I write a song I make sure that the songs are written about people I know and most of the time they're going to mention specific names."

Swift's own Behind The Music story so far reveals that the Wyomissing, Pa., native dropped her first demo to numerous record labels at age 11 and began writing songs when she was 12. By age 14, she relocated to Nashville for work as a songwriter. Two years later came her 2006 triple platinum-selling debut followed by numerous award nominations and/or wins (including country song of the year during Tuesday's BMI Country Awards). Among her most recent performance highlights include teaming up with rockers Def Leppard for a CMT Crossroads special.

"I was never one of those presumptuous hopefuls who thought a career in country music would actually work out for me," says Swift, who cites Faith Hill and Shania Twain as influences. "That's why now I feel so blessed that everything is pretty much coming together."

Sondre Lerche's indie rock mash-up

BRIAN COULTON
for Metro Canada

When Sondre Lerche was growing up in Norway, his musical influences were half a world away.

He didn't embrace the Scandinavian musical traditions paved by Swedish dance-pop quartet ABBA or eclectic Björk of Iceland. Instead of Nordic nostalgia, the 26-year-old saw stars and stripes when forming his vocally tranquil, jazz-touched indie rock repertoire.

"I never ever imagined I would even go to America to play my music or release a record," says Lerche. "I never felt that America would ever hear how I would mix up these American musical ingredients and turn it into my own music."

But domestic success has allowed Lerche to release five albums stateside, most recently penning the soundtrack for the 2007 Steve Carell film Dan in Real Life.

However, Lerche says even though American artists and instrumentation are his chief influences, it's his European birthright that gives him a different perspective on rock 'n' roll.

"When coming from a small country like Norway, you're sort of free to just go after any sort of influence or any kind of music that really excites you or touches you ... That made me more free in a sense."

Sondre Lerche

But when Lerche moved to New York three years ago, he realized the country's culture isn't quite as consistent as he thought. "When you live in a city like New York, it's easy to think that New York is in America, but New York is very different, I find, to a lot of the rest of America. It's sort of the best and worst of popular culture."

Perhaps because Lerche says he shares the cultural conundrum of Canadian artists who struggle between preserving their culture and "selling out" south of the border, the young artist maintains that every time he's in Canada, he enjoys the best of both his heritage and his American influences.

"It feels closer to Europe in a way. I can feel the difference of identity when I'm in a city like Toronto or Montreal," says Lerche.

Beware of the cell ban

Phones only one distraction drivers face behind the wheel

SoundCheck

Alan Cross
alan@ongoinghistory.com

Some distractions we face in the car are as deadly as cellphones.

I was in the car on my way to — I forget, but it must been somewhere important — when my iPhone started to trill. I tried to ignore it, and it was agony. I'm from the Pavlovian school of communications: If a phone rings, I must answer it. But this time, I let it vibrate across the passenger seat until it fell lemming-like onto the floor and safely out of reach. I considered the whole harrowing incident as practice for when Ontario brings in the inevitable no-talking-on-a-mobile-while-driving law.

Like you, I've been cut off or nearly hit by chatty cell morons and I've seen all the stats about how talking and driving dangerously dilutes concentration, so I understand why so many jurisdictions are banning the use of handheld cellphones while behind the wheel.

Black and white issue, right? Stop people from talking on their cellphones behind the wheel and started counting the lives saved.

Well, not quite. What about all the musical distractions that we face in the cockpit these days? Some of them can be every bit as deadly as talking on a handset.

Scanning through radio stations diverts attention from the road. Changing CDs at 100 km/h isn't smart. RDS readouts — the information some radio stations imperfectly scroll across the display of suitably equipped radios — can pull eyes in the wrong direction.

Then there's the growing popularity of iPod interfaces with car audio systems. Some involve running a cable from the headphone jack to an aux input somewhere on the dashboard or a fancy connection that integrates an iPod into the factory radio in the dash. Either way, you're going to fiddle with your iPod's playlists when you really should be worrying about keeping it between the ditches.

Meanwhile, many new car audio systems incorporate large hard drives with high-tech displays, essentially turning the dashboard into one big iPod.

And it's only going to get worse as more manufacturers figure out ways to put Wi-Fi connectivity in cars. Audi and Chrysler already do. Imagine being in traffic with a dude who insists on surfing the Internet on the way to work.

Cracking down on cellphone users behind the wheel is a smart and politically popular idea. But could be a slippery slope if everything beyond this is taken into consideration.

Meanwhile, don't get BMW owners started on their iDrive systems.

"We're freaks," guitarist Amen says of his fellow band members.

Every day is Halloween for metal band Lordi

BRIAN TOWIE
Metro Canada

Lordi's trying to extend the Halloween season a little bit longer by putting the balls back into rock 'n' roll.

The heavy metal rockers are currently re-introducing themselves to North American audiences following the release of fifth album Deadache, touring with Type O Negative in the U.S. and recently appearing on Conan O'Brien.

The ironic hard rock camp isn't lost on fans. Infectious tunes with titles such as Manskin Boots and Bite It Like A Bulldog — a single where the band has invited fans to create and submit their own videos — evoke chuckles from listeners before they find themselves pumping their fists.

"We're freaks," says guitarist Amen. "We're actually surprised that not too many people have thought of the 'monsters on stage' thing before. It's really something. So far the tour has been going well, though a couple of the places we've been to and we're going to won't allow our pyros."

Taking a page out of Kiss' playbook, the headbangers have made a name for themselves in Europe by rocking out in demonic outfits set to spectacular pyrotechnics at live gigs, the most notable instance being at the 2006 Eurovision song contest in Athens. Representing their native Finland, Lordi blew the roof off the relatively austere ceremonies by unleashing their "arockalypse" on an unsuspecting audience, handily winning that year's contest and propelling them to stardom.

A year later, Lordi joined heavy-metal aristocrat Ozzy Osbourne on the 2007 Ozzfest tour in the U.S. — an unpaid sojourn that saw the band booed offstage at some gigs and losing their bus to a hijacking.

"He never gave us any pointers or anything, but it was great to tour with someone who bit the head off of a bat," he says of Osbourne. "He's a great guy."

Lordi soldiers on despite rotten financial luck. The band's front company, Lordi Enterprises, is hemorrhaging money after an unsuccessful horror movie and soft drink line. Amen isn't worried for the future, but does admit it's no cakewalk to perform given their debts. We've learned that it's very expensive to do a movie," he laughs. "And it takes a lot of money to do those costumes. But we love it. For us, every day is Halloween."

Blunt words

Singer readies to guest edit Metro worldwide

JIM REYNO
Metro Canada

How's this for a headline: Brangelina Share Café Latte En Route To Adoption Agency. Not on James Blunt's watch.

The multimillion-selling singer-songwriter will be Metro International's first global guest editor for the Nov. 17 edition.

"I don't think celebrity coverage is that interesting, really," Blunt said in a recent interview, adding that the media should "temper" their coverage of fluff with more serious stuff.

And don't give him that line about the media being a mere reflection of what's happening in the world, as one editor said long ago to a young reporter.

"You have drug addicts and you have drug dealers," Blunt said on his cellphone before a concert in Nuremberg, Germany. "Your (former) boss is saying he's the drug dealer, and he's not to blame then, is he? The addicts need help."

Blunt, whose breakout hit was You're Beautiful in 2005, says the worldwide free Metro can lead the way to less frivolous coverage.

"I think, probably, something like Metro … (is) in a relatively good position to approach journalism for the original reasons, which is presumably to investigate and inform people," he said. "Whereas if your focus purely becomes newspaper sales — suddenly the truth is less interesting over what is sensationalistic.

"So I definitely think a balance has to be found."

Blunt, whose first two albums have sold more than 14 million copies worldwide, says he jumped at the chance to get a behind-the-scenes look at a newspaper.

"The power of the media is phenomenal," said the 34-year-old Brit. "In a way, one could argue that they decide governments in the first place. Definitely, at least, in Britain."

Blunt will work with global editor-in-chief Sakari Pitkanen at Metro's Rome office in advance of the Nov. 17 issue.

"We have a few topics we're going to work up together," said Blunt. "He's going to show me the ropes, really, and discuss what's going on in the world today. It will be really interesting to do that.

"It's a pretty amazing period of time right now, and I see that from being on tour."

Blunt, who served six years in the British army, kicks off the Canadian leg of his 14-month world tour Nov. 17 in Vancouver. He'll play 12 dates here, including three in Alberta, where he spent six months in 1998 at CFB Suffield.

"On the Canadian Prairie, which is an amazing place to be," said Blunt. "I saw the Northern Lights at night, and moose and wolves running past. A really beautiful part of the world."

• Kaiser Chiefs, Off With Their Heads: U.K. buzz band returns with a raucous hook-filled update to their Brit-pop sound with great new-wave echoes. The result is riotous fun that foreshadowed on their debut.

• Mother Mother, O My Heart: Quirky Vancouver collective bounce and sway with torch-song intensity in an ornate, yet supremely catchy pop universe with a Pixies-like flair and heavenly harmonies to spare.

• Santogold, Santogold: Much akin to M.I.A, Santogold mashes tropical rhythms and dub-drenched beats with her soulful chants to create a fresh urban sound with remarkable range.

Suzie McNeil's second album Rock-n-Roller was released last week.

Classic rock connection

Suzie McNeil drops new disc

IAN NATHANSON
for Metro Canada

As Suzie McNeil rhymes off a number of classic rock favourites on the title cut of her newly released second album, Rock-n-Roller, the Mississauga-born, Toronto-based singer notices that only a scant few of those favourites were written and performed by women.

"Rock 'n' roll is definitely a man's world. That's part of my struggle as well as part of my everyday journey and it's not an easy road," McNeil tells Metro. There's only a limited number of women holding the torch right now in terms of pop rock. But I grew up listening to a lot of those classics. I love rock because that's so much of who I am."

McNeil's formative performance years included singing with Black Sabbath and ABBA tribute bands along with backing the likes Ronnie Hawkins, Glass Tiger's Alan Frew and the late Jeff Healey. A move to Los Angeles led to her 2005 appearance on the CBS reality series Rock Star: INXS. While the Aussie group ultimately chose fellow Canadian J.D. Fortune as front man, McNeil's vocals did make it onto the eventual INXS release, Switch.

"I did connect with INXS very well," McNeil says. "I know at one point that Andrew Farriss, one of the group's main songwriters, really wanted a woman to front the band."

Her appearance on Rock Star: INXS opened a few more high-profile connections, including touring as backup singer for Pink in 2006 and a vocal cameo alongside Clay Aiken covering Foreigner's I Want To Know What Love Is on the American Idol runner-up's effort, A Thousand Different Ways, that same year.

While her 2007 debut, Broken & Beautiful, relied mainly on power-pop and ballads, McNeil maintained her classic rock connection months afterwards by appearing as the character Oz in the Toronto production of We Will Rock You, a musical adapted from the songs of Queen. And while the 32-year-old might cite an opening slot for Aerosmith as one of many career highlights, McNeil can't say enough of getting a personal compliment from Queen guitarist Brian May.

"On the show's opening night, after I was finished singing (Bohemian Rhapsody), I came offstage and Brian shows up to give me a huge hug," McNeil says. "He then said, 'I cried. I've never cried at that song before.' And this coming from the guy who wrote the song."

In concert

• Suzie McNeil plays a free afternoon show at First Canadian Place on Nov. 20.

P. Diddy to appear on CSI

South Park election spoof

Rick's TV Picks

South Park
Air date: Today
Network: Comedy Network

TREY PARKER and Matt Stone maintain their reputation for topicality with a spoof of the recent U.S. election filtered through the Ocean's 11 films. While South Park's adults run riot celebrating Obama's election, the presidential candidates reveal their plan to steal the Hope Diamond. As usual, the real satirical venom is in the context, not the plot.

Desperate Housewives
Air date: Sunday
Network: CTV

GUEST STARS FOR the night's show are indie rock band Tokyo Police Club. I haven't a clue what it means, but it's fun to write — like when Joe Namath appeared on the Brady Bunch.

Gervais visits Sesame Street

IntelleVision

Rick McGinnis
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

SO WHAT IS IT WITH YOU AND BERT, NOT THAT I HAVE A PROBLEM WITH IT OR ANYTHING: Ricky Gervais has been asked to do a guest spot on Sesame Street, an honour that has been bestowed on everyone from Laura Bush and Jack Black to Max Headroom and Yo-Yo Ma, and which signals the likelihood that, no matter what horrible thing you do for the rest of your life, somebody's grandmother can be called upon to describe you as "a nice person, but they've obviously got a few problems."

Gervais, who has already appeared in animated form in The Simpsons and Grand Theft Auto IV, told the BBC "there are some things you don't turn down." Gervais also said he was reluctant to accept a rumoured offer to host the Oscars, and his website broke the news that a revival of Extras for one more Christmas special had reached the stage where he's asked Danny DeVito, Michael Douglas and Al Pacino to appear in the show. What, precisely, Al Pacino might do to embarrass himself on the show that he hasn't already surpassed in his last 15 years of film roles remains to be seen, of course.

WHAT'S ONE STEP BELOW TEMP?: In related Office news, B.J. Novak will be taking a break from playing Ryan the temp-turned-executive-turned-jailbird-turned-temp-receptionist on the NBC show. Novak has a role in Quentin Tarantino's new film, according to an Entertainment Weekly story, and will be gone from Dunder Mifflin for several episodes, which might turn out to be a permanent absence according to another source, who said Novak thinks that Ryan has played himself out.

This might solve the problem of bringing Jenna Fischer back after a mostly Pamless season, which EW seems to think is the only way to bring Season 5 to a satisfying conclusion, even if it will deprive the show of one of its best running gags.

Frankly, I'm amazed that an afterthought character like Ryan has turned out to be so resilient, though if I'm forced to be honest, it still seems like a miracle that the show has gone on so long after exhausting the inspiration it took from Ricky Gervais' original.

Rick McGinnis writes about music, movies, books and television, but not opera.

Gehry's vision unveiled

AGO reopens today after being closed for more than a year

RICK MCGINNIS
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

That it came in "on time and on budget" was the least of the accomplishments applauded by Charlie Baillie, president of the Art Gallery of Ontario's board of trustees, at the unveiling of the controversial renovation of the gallery by star architect Frank Gehry.

Baillie was also proud to announce that fundraising had exceeded expectations, and that "our building is paid for," but left it to museum director Matthew Teitelbaum to describe Gehry's work as "a building of light and wood."

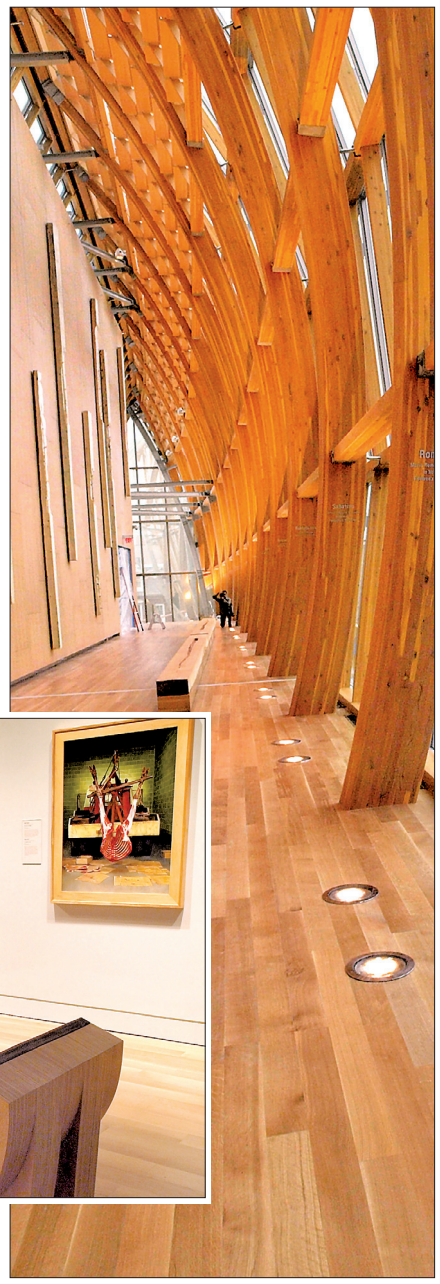
There was audible disappointment in a room four years ago when Gehry unveiled the plans for his makeover of the AGO, mostly due to the absence of the billowing metal cladding that had capped his reputation with projects like the Disney Concert Hall in Los Angeles and the Guggenheim Museum in Bilbao, Spain.

The design was substantially tweaked since then, and a tour of the building revealed just how successful Gehry has been in spite of what were probably unfair expectations. "I didn't touch the old galleries," Gehry told the press. "I copped out." The architect grew up near the museum, and had fond boyhood memories of the European galleries off the Walker Court, and told the AGO they were among the things he wouldn't change "because they're perfect."

What Gehry has done is give the gallery spectacular views it never had before, like the city panorama revealed through louvered windows in the new Baillie Court, and the long, magnificent view along Dundas Street showcased in the galleria running the length of the new front façade, with its forest of curved wooden ribs. The renovation is both practical and sensitive, and will probably inspire comparisons to the Royal Ontario Museum that will doubtless cast the Daniel Libeskind renovation opened last year in an increasingly unfavourable light.

In response to a question about increased admission prices, Gehry called the $3 increase to $18 "highway robbery," and complained about the decline in art and music appreciation programs in schools, which he says are making them "a desert." He did, however, seem happy with his work on the AGO.

"It's a real Frank Gehry building," he said, adding, "there's stuff I'd like to do, still."



ALL PHOTOS BY RICK MCGINNIS/METRO TORONTO

From left: Gehry has restored the AGO's Walker Court to its central place in the gallery, but has contributed this wood-clad spiral staircase to the space; one of the modular benches designed by Frank Gehry; a look down the east side of the galleria — built from glass, steel and arcs of laminated wood, it's the most spectacular space in the building.

Grand opening

• The Art Gallery of Ontario, after being closed for more than a year for final renovations, will officially re-open its doors to the public today at precisely 4 p.m. to reveal Canada's first Frank Gehry-designed building.

"(Today) is all about welcoming people back to their AGO," says Danielle Riposati, a partner at National Public Relations who helps oversee today's ceremonies. "It's going to be a really special moment. It's going to be the culmination of this eight-year transformation project and it's going to be an opportunity to let people experience the AGO right away."

Visitors will not only be treated to free admission throughout the weekend, but from noon to 10 p.m. today a variety of outdoor activities will be set up outside the gallery.

"There are going to be TV screens along Dundas and McCaul that will be showing all kinds of neat videos, photography exhibits, cool things about the AGO, and historical footage," says Riposati.

In addition to the screens, Riposati explains there will be large canvases people can draw on, as well as local artists who will sketch people's portraits for free.

Linda Milrod, senior project manager and installation director for the AGO, says that visitors will be blown away the transformation project and the art on display.

"People will be just totally excited by a brand-new building."

After Maria

After being voted off How Do You Solve a Problem Like Maria? on CBC, each of the Maria-hopefuls has had a different and usually rewarding career path.

Closest to home, Allie Hughes has been pursuing her career as an independent singer-songwriter. If you want to catch up with her, she'll be at the Horseshoe Tavern on Wednesday. Hughes and her band are frequently seen around Toronto, so keep your eyes open for them. Her music is worth the effort.

But what about the rest? Here's what a few have been up to.

Alison Jutzi: "I've done several commercials ... shot a music video for The Dears, a Montreal-based band, shot an episode of Urban Legends to air on the A&E Biography channel in the spring, and right now I'm performing in A Christmas Carol with Theatre North West in B.C."

Jayme Armstrong: "I did two cancer benefits called The JAM Show with Marisa. I will also be playing Audrey in Little Shop of Horrors at Centennial Theatre in Vancouver in January."

Donna Lajeunesse: "I've mostly been working in my community, teaching singing and workshops for youth. I did a fundraiser for Oshawa Little Theatre, and we raised almost $10,000! I'm also in final consideration for the role of Elphaba in Wicked at Universal Japan." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Aniston all about honesty

PEOPLE Jennifer Aniston has played down scathing comments she made about actress Angelina Jolie in a recent interview, insisting she answered questions "as honestly" as she could, imdb.com reports.

The actress blasted Jolie as "uncool" in a candid chat with Vogue magazine, just weeks after her ex-husband Brad Pitt's partner revealed they fell in love on the set of 2005 movie Mr. and Mrs. Smith.

Aniston and Pitt split in 2005, after which Pitt set up home with Jolie, becoming a father to three adopted children, as well as having another three biological babies with her.

Aniston opened up again in an interview with talk-show host Oprah Winfrey, admitting she decided to finally pass comment on Jolie's behaviour because she wanted to be truthful.

When quizzed on the revelation by Winfrey on her show, which was scheduled to air yesterday, Aniston explains, "I basically just answered it (Jolie question) as honestly as I could."

But Aniston refused to bash her ex-partner, insisting she is proud of Pitt's achievements since they decided to divorce.

"He's done some amazing things."

The 15-year-old Hannah Montana star has admitted to dating Gaston, five years her senior, as their relationship has heated up in recent months.

But Cyrus insists she has had enough of the relentless rumours about her love life since her romance with singer Nick Jonas reportedly sparked a love rivalry with fellow teen star Selena Gomez earlier this year.

When asked about her boyfriend on Good Morning America, Cyrus hesitated: "Um, I'm going to keep that one zip-tight, locked and throw away the key."

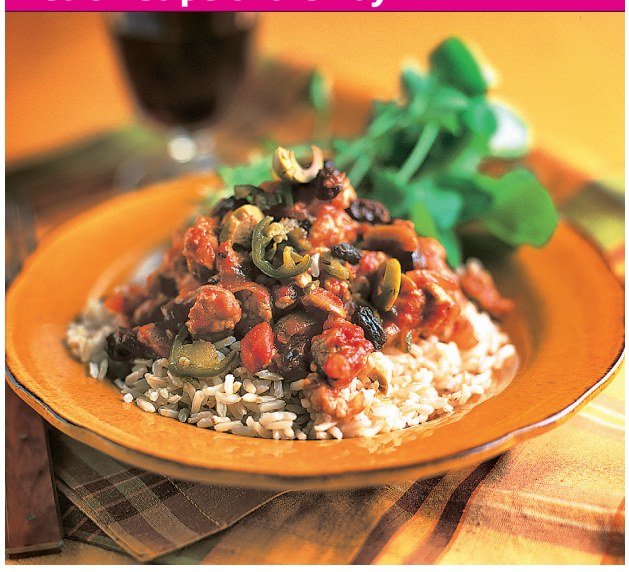
Metro Recipe of the Day



Picadillo With Rice

INGREDIENTS:

1 tbsp (15 mL) vegetable oil
1 large onion, finely chopped
3 garlic cloves, crushed
1 lb (500 g) lean ground pork
2 cups passata or a lightly diluted tomato pasta sauce
2/3 cup (150 mL) raisins
1/4 cup (50 mL) pitted green olives, coarsely chopped
1/4 cup (50 mL) pickled sliced jalapeños, finely chopped
1 tsp (5 mL) dried oregano
1 cup (250 mL) long-grain white rice
Salt and freshly ground black pepper

METHOD:

1. Heat oil in a large frying pan over a moderate heat. Add onion and garlic and cook for 5 minutes, stirring frequently, until onion is soft.

2. Add pork and cook, stirring constantly to break up large lumps, for 3 minutes until no longer pink. Add passata, raisins, olives, jalapeños and dried oregano to the pan. Season with salt and freshly ground black pepper, bring to a boil, then reduce heat and simmer for 15–20 minutes, stirring frequently, until pork is cooked through and flavours have melded together.

3. Meanwhile, cook rice according to the packet instructions.

4. Divide rice among four plates. Serve minced meat mixture over the top.

GEMINI
